

Targeting Gen-Y

Understanding the Content Needs for Retaining Millennials

If the phrase 'brave new world' meant anything in the past, look again! The millennials have changed the game on both ends of the B2B chain. They are your purchasers. They are your business leaders. They are the new face of a B2B industry which is bubbling with new technology.

With a purchasing power of $200 billion by 2017 in US alone, it's a millennial playground out there! Retention of the Gen-Y starts with playing their game – their way. But sadly, most of them don't like what you have to offer.

Millennials (n.; pronunciation: mill-~~ill~~-a-nnnni-als):

Generally referred to the demographic within 18-25 (ambiguously 18-35) years' age-profile. Ideally, it is the generation which was born between the late 80s and the early 2000s.

Synonymous with: Generation-Y, Gen-Y, millennial generation etc.

Not to be confused with: Gen-X or Baby Boomers

Source: Wikipedia

The Gen-Y Genome

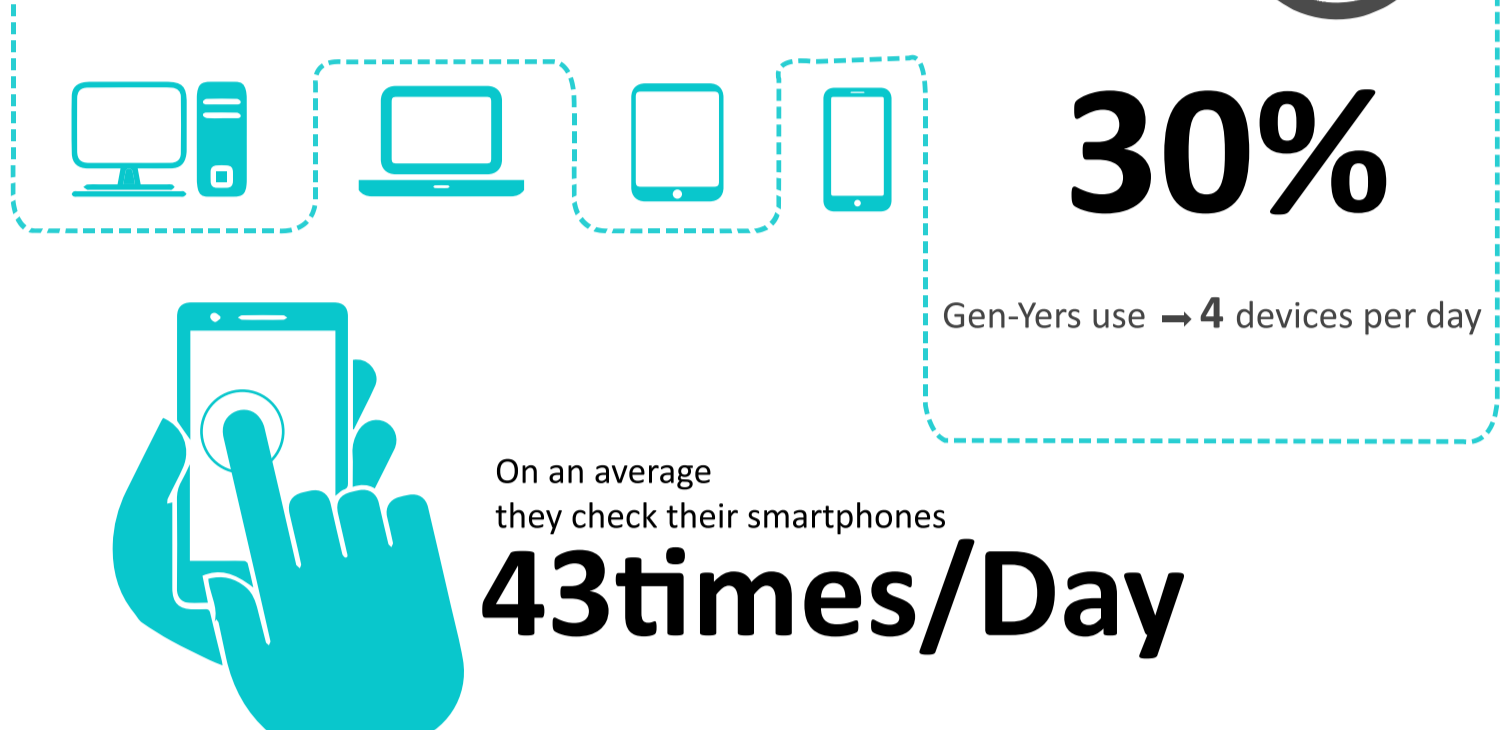

Source: HubSpot

The Gen-Y brigade makes up about 27% of the entire US population.

Gen-Y L-O-V-E Technology!

Source: HubSpot

From Multi-task to Multi-platforms:

Source: HubSpot

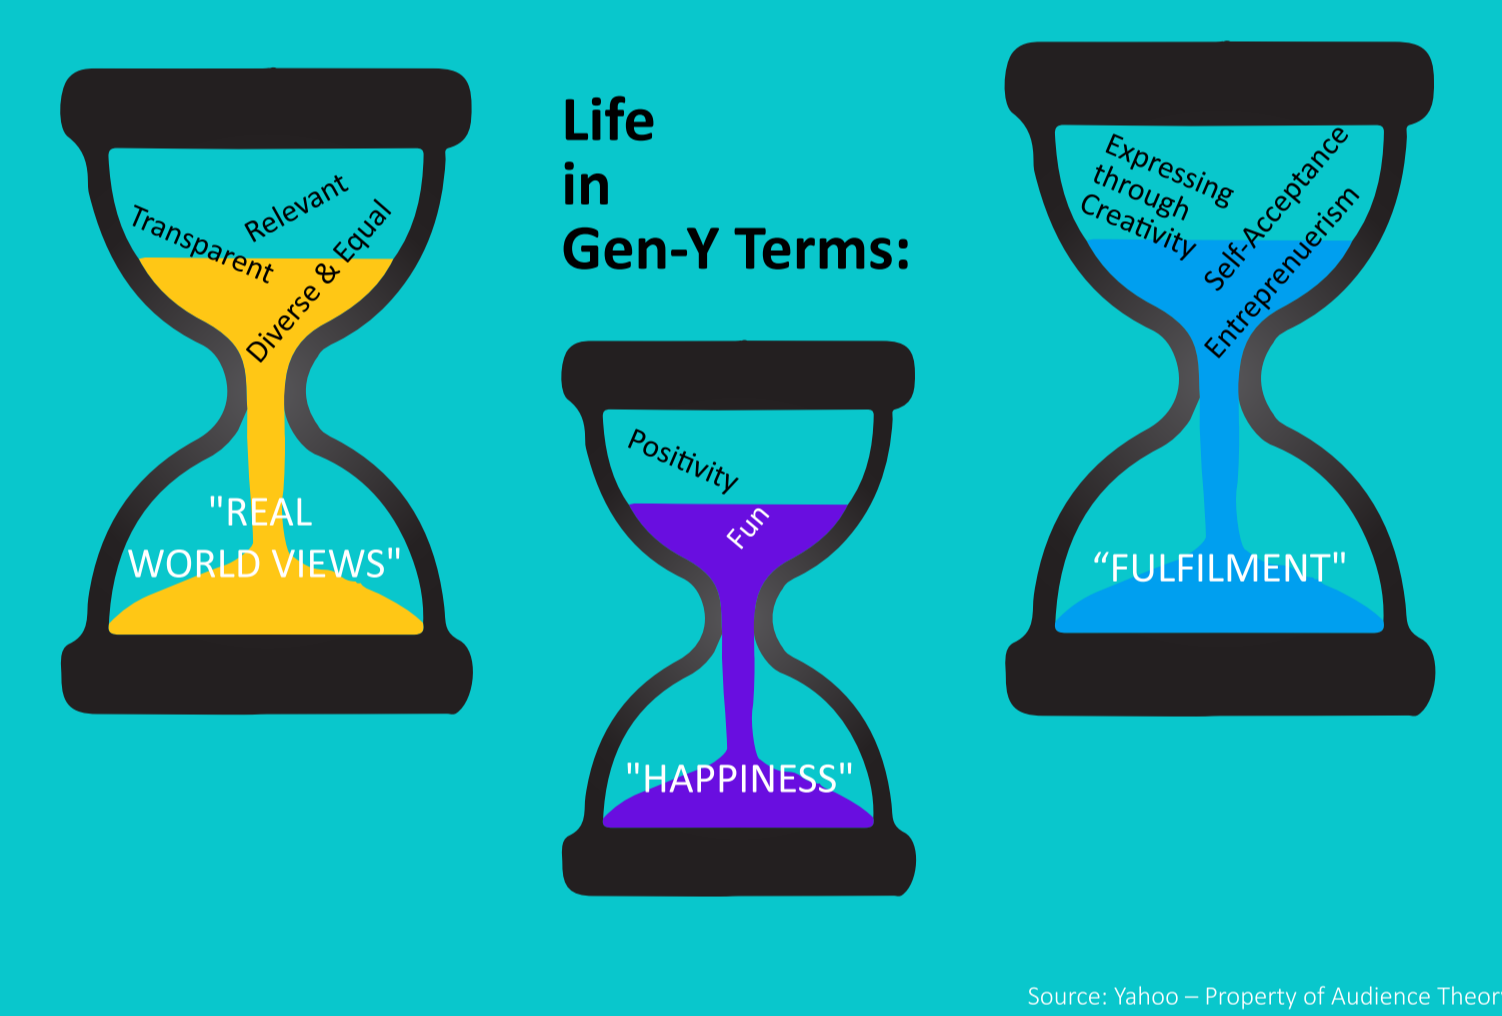

Gen-Y Thinks your Content is Boring

Source: NewsCred

45% of millennials don't find brand content worth sharing.

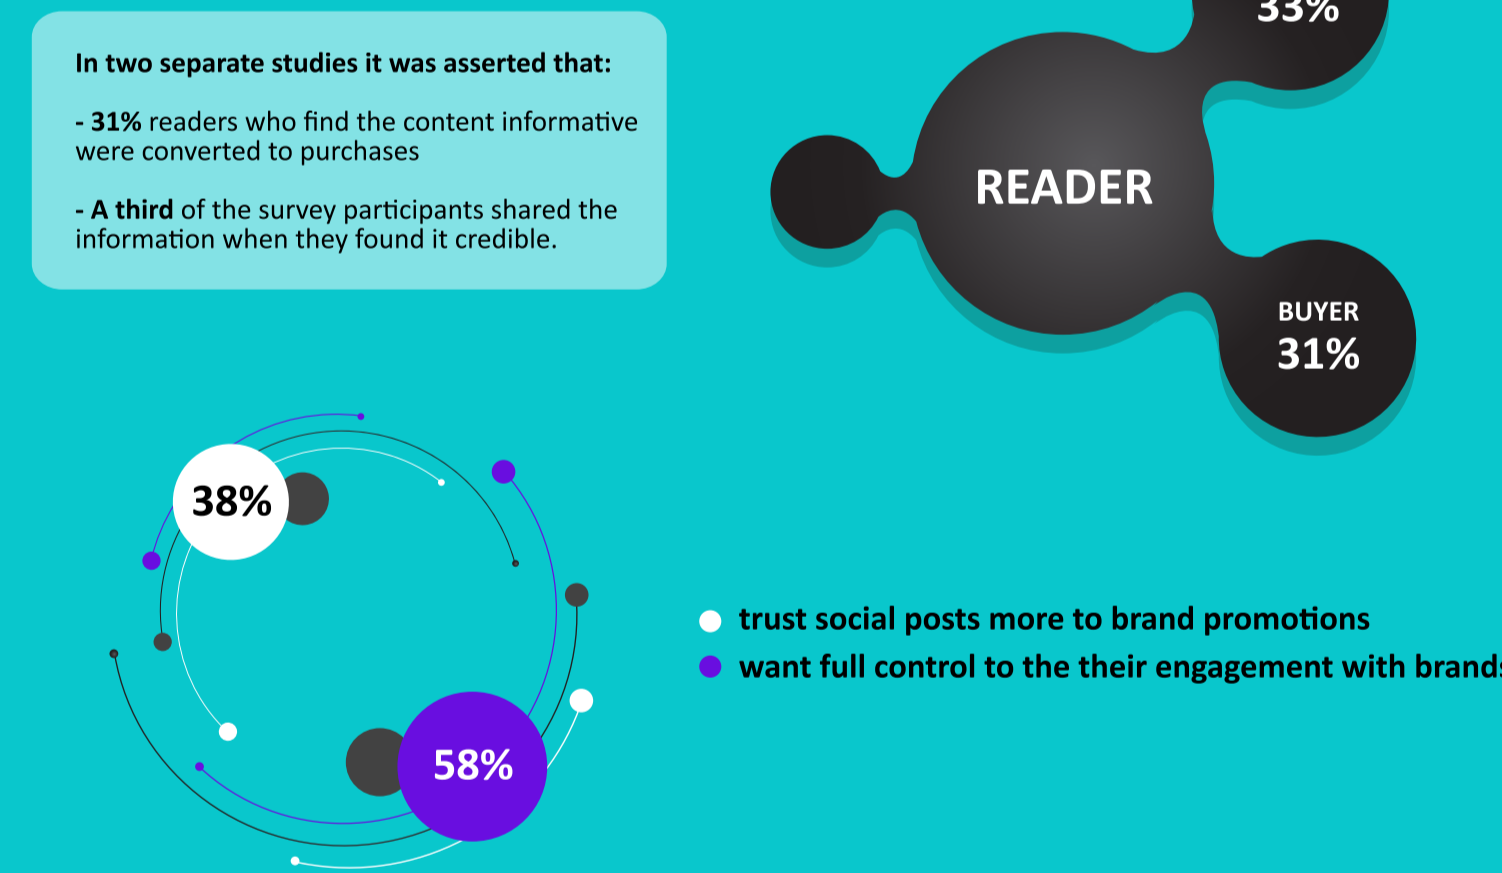

What Millennials Want from Brand Communicators?

Source: Yahoo – Property of Audience Theory

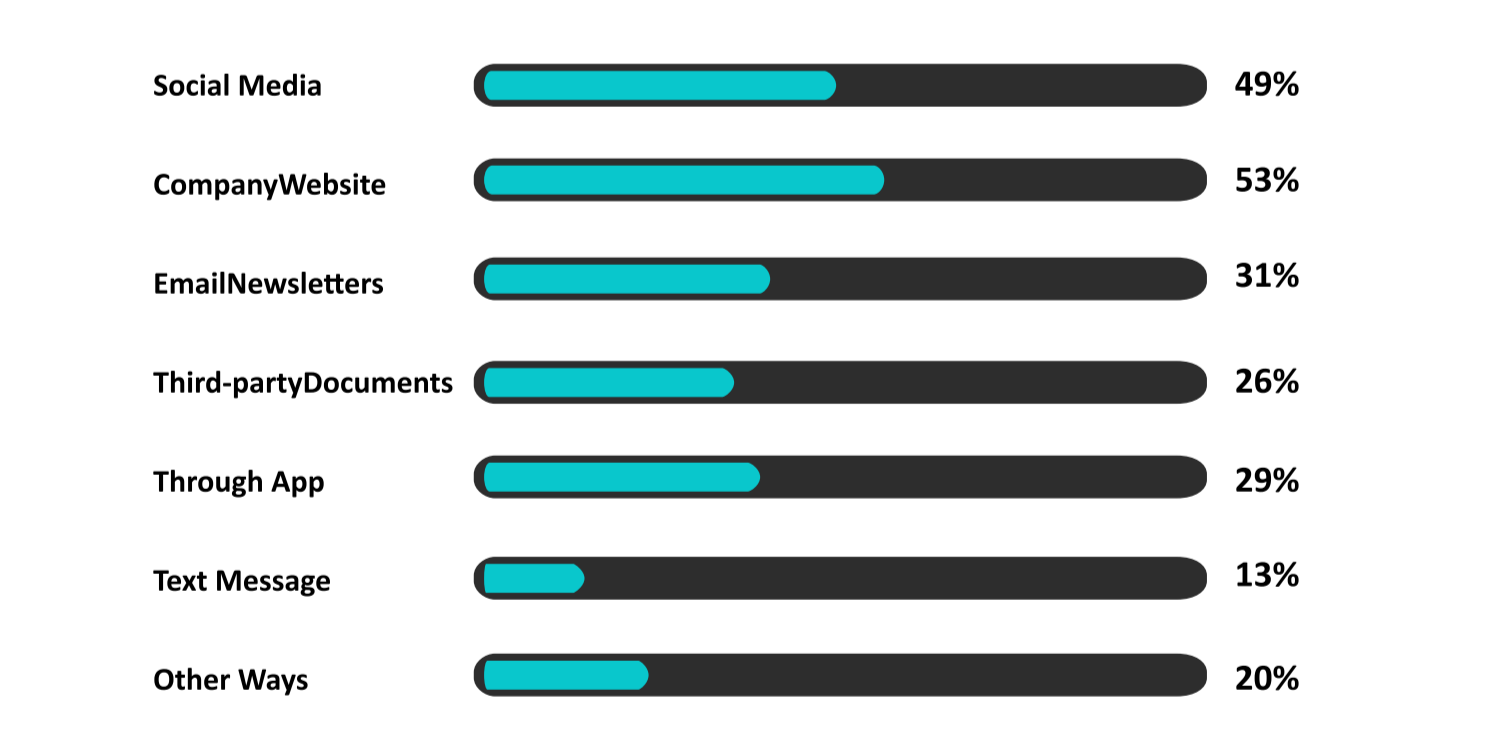

Millennials are the first generation to be born in the digital advertisement era, where they could not only receive it, but could engage and interact with it.

They are ready to share your content too, provided that it's worth sharing!

Source: Yahoo, NewsCred

Gen-Y Wants to Engage with You on:

Source: NewsCred

Content for Millennials:

Socially Speaking...

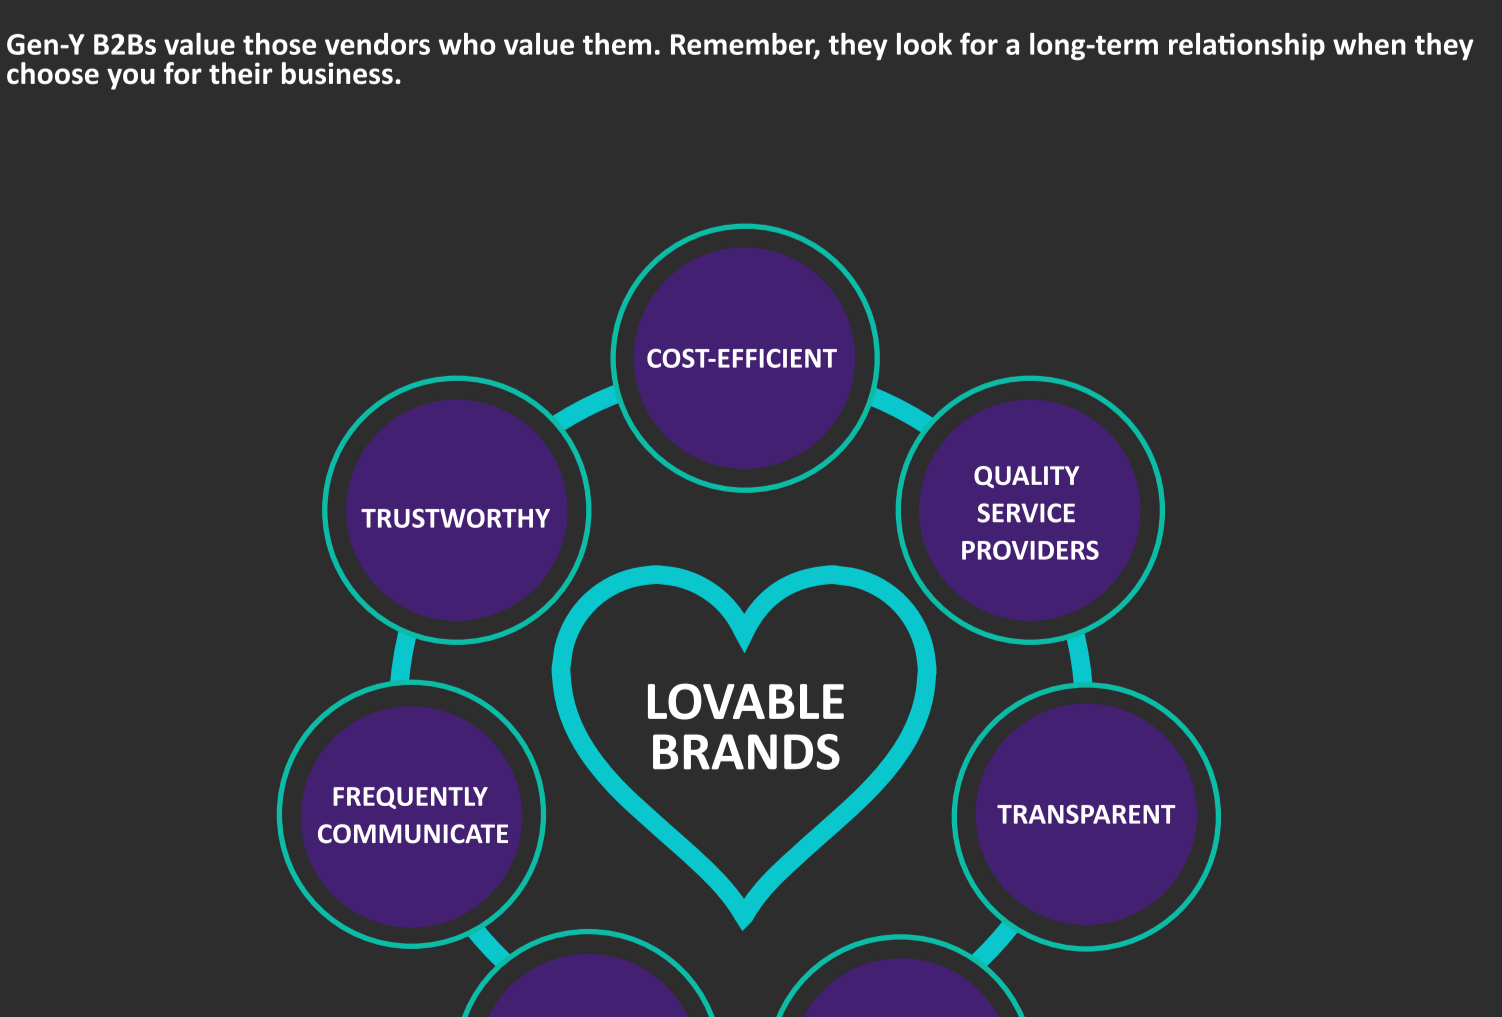

Source: Yahoo- Content Marketing Ingestion Study

Millennials find their major share of content from Facebook and Google.

Brands that Stick

Gen-Y B2Bs value those vendors who value them. Remember, they look for a long-term relationship when they choose you for their business.

With a purchase power that will surpass $1.4 trillion by 2020, the Millennials are a generation that you must not ignore. Leaving them out of your customer marketing strategies will only alienate future B2B prospects out from your purview. Take care that you do the most to retain them. Contact Lake B2B at 800-710-5516 / info@lakeb2b.com to know more about the best customer retention strategies in the market.