

Aviation Manufacturer Bags $550k Worth of New Deals from One Custom Dataset

Abstract :

Flying high is a passion. And finding prospects sharing the same vision as yours is a rarity. A renowned aviation parts manufacturer hit the sales barrier last year for the same reason. They needed top aviation enthusiasts from the big-billion business club – but with very particular characteristics to match their buyer persona. Good information is not easy to find, but Lake B2B rose to the occasion. All it needed was the human touch.

Client:

Our client is a globally renowned brand in the aviation manufacturing industry. From commercial to military, the company provides a vast range of customized aviation transport options. The 50+ years old player is based in Kansas, USA. The client had hit a threshold in expanding their sales margins, and wanted to re-explore their target-base, starting from in their home country.

Persona Details:

Challenges:

- ◆ Reaching high network B2B targets is a hierarchical hassle, and most have multiple validated contacts.
- ◆ With such a specific focus (aircraft ownership of top business heads), the circle of interest would be infinitesimal.
- ◆ The information for the premium intelligence fields are not available in the normal market.

For the sheer complexity of the project, the client had to cross a lot of doors before approaching Lake B2B with the impossible.

Solutions:

What they said...

"Lake B2B found the information we exactly needed to reach our quarterly targets. The information was highly classified, and after facing multiple refusals from others, it was them who made the venture a success."
